It's a survival game. It is a puzzle game. We are working on an actual story. We need to make this game as "realistic" as possible. It's supposed to be cold and dark, About The Project As you can see we are team mates of the first Island, made by a different developer. We are trying to make this game better and better, We have 2 teams, one making the graphics, animations and music, and another one making the gameplay. I'll try to explain better. Making The Graphics We're making a normal game, with 2 characters: The ship's crew and a main character. We are building the graphics using the 3D game engine Unity3D. So you can see what the game look like so far: Making The Gameplay We are making the game in Unity, so this is how the game play is now: The characters move around in 3D, making a 'jungle forest' and enemies. It's a Survival game. With that... I'll be updating the progress of the game as time passes by. And we'll keep you informed about the release date and all that. The island, as well as all the worlds, will be inspired by the quia. It's a collection of myths, stories, mythology, and real places all around the world. And it's also the name of our dev. Hey! I just want to let you know we're still alive! It's been a couple of months, but hopefully you've been able to follow the development of our game as well as our progress on the story. Making the graphics will be finished within this month. This will give us some time to polish the gameplay. We will then start to work on the story in order to make a good story to this game. After that, the normal game (ie. Ship Crew and main character) will be done. We will try to get something more representative as soon as we can... We're too busy working on it to actually play it. I just wanted to let you know that I've finished writing the story of the game! We've written 100% of the game story and it's now up on our website! Just check it out! We're really happy with it. What I would like to do is have you check this out, give us some feedback and enjoy the game! Here d41b202975

What's new:

A Tale of the early 20th Century an early version of what is become now known as World War I From the introduction: In his Times review, Kovel reviewed 'Letters in High Places: An Oral History of the Great War' by Michelle Obama, recounting her life just before her election to the presidency: "Perhaps if the ramifications of political victory were not so overwhelming, she could afford to live as not one of them, not a spokeswoman for the powerful among us." Counterbalance: All too often we see 'living lives not one of them': not as part of society but as victims of society: but are they? Many thousands helped to free France Royal Naval Auxiliary Service - Timeline and history: In the wake of the Tsar's Ascent from the Prussian quarters of Berlin to the city of Potsdam, Allied Red Cross workers brought aid to the wounded on the streets. In an attempt to assist army members, even Royal Naval servicemen conveyed these wounded to safety. The story of this group of men began in the autumn of 1914, when the Royal Naval Division was mobilized in France to assist the armies of France and Flanders. However, as a skirmishing force, it was never called upon to defend an allied position nor to be part of anything more than a demonstration of force. Thus, for the majority of its tour in France, the RND was massed with other units in reserve. While it was in reserve it was continually called upon to feed, evacuate and guard wounded soldiers, sometimes in the trenches, sometimes on the parade grounds. During the autumn of 1914, for example, the RND was the fourth largest Allied force on the Western Front. Royal Naval Division (Royal Marines), First World War Writing to his mother on 11th May 1915, Albert stated that he had just returned from a visit to the West Coast, writing: "Lots of German saps have been brought down to DOCKVILLE, and scores of Germans are dying... The work of the prisoners can be recognised by the work gang in front of the hospital. The R.N. Division has now put in their Memorial Day, the men all marched to the MoD (shipyard) & stood in line on a newly dug up roadway & all got round the DUTCH sailors, standing on their heads shouting death-to-the-Kaiser when the band struck up The Marseillaise."
